Football is the most popular sport all over the world. A lot of people play it, watch it and speak about it. In football a player can perfectly control the ball with each part of his body except the hands or arms. The only person who can touch the ball and even hold it is the goalkeeper. What makes football highly exciting is that weak teams sometimes beat great famous teams.

Championships in football are nearly held in all countries of the world. There are also the continental championships which are called the Cup of Nations. Football is also included in the Olympic Games but the most important championship in football is the World Cup. It is a professional championship which is organized by FIFA and held between national football teams every four years. Teams of every continent compete to represent their countries to win the World Cup. Football is a costly sport as players are sold at very high prices. Also, millions are paid every
